| 7/1/09 | SAC  | California's new fiscal year begins today, and the state Senate has failed to reach a revised budget agreement to keep from issuing IOUs for its bills. Facing a $24 billion deficit, lawmakers were unsuccessful in approving $3.3 billion in budget cuts that would have temporarily averted the use of IOUs. State controller John Chiang is set to begin using the IOUs on Thursday, which could damage the state's credit rating. However, lawmakers still can avoid giving out the IOUs if they reach a budget deal before Thursday.  | Julie Small  | 10:00 |
| 7/1/09 | HEAL | Worried about damaging effects on the liver, an FDA advisory panel has recommended that the agency ban drugs such as Percoset and Vicodin that combine acetaminophen (generic for Tylenol) with another drug. Additionally, the panel has advised a lower maximum dosage for acetaminophen and that maximum strength dosages, currently available over the counter, should require a prescription.  | Bruce Japson   | 20:00 |
| 7/1/09 | ART  | Larry talks with various museum directors in Southern California to find out how their museums are faring in this tough economic climate.   | Charles Young, Christopher Knight, Melody Kanschak, Bolton Colburn, Ron Nelson | 30:00 |
| 7/1/09 | MEDI | They had it first...the death of Michael Jackson. So how does TMZ do it? Larry talks with experts about TMZ and their success at "scooping" more traditional news outlets. Is their journalism true journalism? Or just gossip? Larry finds out.  | Marc Cooper  | 40:00 |
| 7/1/09 | LIT  | Could weather explain the extinction of the dinosaurs, the disappearance of the Mayans, and the fabled crossing of the Red Sea by the Israelites? Professor Randy Cerveny is a climatologist who studies such questions. In his new book, "Weather's Greatest Mysteries Solved!", he explains the fascinating climate events of the past and present. He also looks at current research that attempts to forecast the weather for the next 10,000 years. Randy Cerveny joins Larry Mantle to share intriguing details of weather's important mysteries.   | Randy Cerveny  | 20:00 |
| 7/1/09 | EDU  | Birmingham High School, LAUSD's largest high school campus, was already embroiled in a tricky effort to become a charter school this fall before Sacha Baron Cohen's "Bruno" character entered the mix. The gay Austrian fashion diva did an unauthorized photo shoot with Birmingham's football team, sending district officials into a tizzy and jeopardizing the school's charter approval before the LAUSD Board. What do Bruno and Birmingham have in common besides racy photographs? Apparently, controversy.  | Tamar Galatzan, Chris Monaster   |       |
| 7/1/09 | LAW  | Chief Bratton sought to fire four officers accused of using excessive force in the 2007 May Day gathering at MacArthur Park. But a three-person disciplinary panel, called the Board of Rights, refused to terminate the officers, instead imposing a maximum penalty of a 20-day suspension. How much will this hamper the LAPD's larger reform efforts at improving community relations?  | Carol Sobel  |       |
| 7/1/09 | ECON | The California state legislature failed to pass a budget before today's fiscal year deadline, prompting Gov. Schwarzenegger to declare a state of emergency—including three furlough days per month for state employees and his refusal to sign any legislation until a budget solution is reached. Is the process being held up by "genteel extortion" from the minority party?  | Karen Bass, Dan Walters  |       |
| 7/1/09 | MIL  | The renewed battle over the military's controversial "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy on openly gay soldiers could be facing a pivotal moment with the case of Lt. Dan Choi. Lt. Choi is facing discharge from the New York National Guard because he publicly announced that he's gay, in protest of Don't Ask, Don't Tell. Could his case be the tipping point that pushes the Obama administration to review the policies on gays in the military?   | Lt. Dan Choi, Charles Moran  |       |
| 7/1/09 | POLI | July 6 through 8 will mark summit talks between President Barack Obama and Russian President Dmitry Medvedev. On the table: Iran, Afghanistan, nuclear arms reductions, proliferation, and a possibly treaty on cyber-security.   | Larry Caldwell, Charles Kupchan, Tom Kellerman                                 |       |

| 7/2/09 | IE   | Activists demand US Border Patrol end immigration raids   | Cuevas   | 1:33  |
| 7/2/09 | POLI | Faced with a $26 billion deficit, state officials are set to begin issuing IOUs later today to pay for part of California's bills. Those on government assistance, including the elderly, disabled, and low-income individuals, will still receive their regular checks, while businesses with state contracts and taxpayers awaiting refunds are most likely to receive IOUs. Payments to state workers, schools, Medi-Cal providers, and other services are protected by law from receiving an IOU instead of a real check. As part of the budget crisis, Governor Schwarzenegger declared a fiscal emergency and ordered government workers to take a third unpaid furlough day each month. Larry Mantle gets the latest on the ongoing budget battle.  | Zev Yaroslavsky, Gary Toebben, Julie Small                                     | 30:00 |
| 7/2/09 | TRAN | The Secretary of Transportation, Ray LaHood is in the western United States to promote several federal initiatives related to transportation. On Tuesday he was in Denver to break ground on a Recovery Act project – it's a major highway resurfacing and bike trail project. On Wednesday, he was in Portland, Oregon to help unveil a new street car for an extension that received federal funds this past spring. Today, Secretary LaHood will be joining Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid to make a major announcement about high-speed rail between California and Nevada. Also, the Secretary and DOT are working hard to the CARS program up and running. CARS stands for the "Car Allowance Rebate System" and is the program that allows drivers to turn in low-mileage cars and buy a more fuel efficient vehicle at a discount. Larry and Ray LaHood discuss these projects and future of transportation in America | Ray LaHood   | 30:00 |

|--------|-------|---|--|-------|
| 7/2/09 | TRAN  | A federal government transportation commission has endorsed a plan to switch from a traditional fuel tax to a pay-per-mile road tax using GPS systems. Rather than an 18-cent per gallon surcharge on gasoline, drivers would be taxed per-mile, with the option of charging more during rush hour. Although the White House has rejected the plan, the National Surface Transportation Infrastructure Financing Commission believes such a system will be put into effect by 2020. Would a per-mile driving tax discourage drivers from getting behind the wheel of fuel-efficient vehicles? Is this plan a better way to distribute the cost of highway maintenance? Larry Mantle takes your calls. | Open Phones                                | 30:00 |
| 7/2/09 | LIT   | Karl Taro Greenfeld had a far from an idyllic, suburban childhood. He grew up in the 1960's coping with the all-consuming demands of his brother Noah's autism, which his Father wrote about in a bestselling book called A Child Called Noah . In "Boy Alone: A Brother's Memoir" Greenfield expresses all the frustration and fury of living intimately with his brother's severe disability. He describes Noah's erratic behavior as well as his own isolation, the flip side of his brother's inability to function as a self-sufficient adult. Larry Mantle talks with the author about the challenges families and especially siblings face in living with an autistic child.            | Karl Taro Greenfeld                        | 30:00 |
| 7/2/09 | ECON  | What happened to the great American economic recovery? While other economic indicators, from manufacturing orders to purchases of durable goods, continue to show slow improvements, the unemployment rate jumped to 9.5% and workers' wages dropped. While the stock market rallies and economists grow slightly more optimistic, what is the suffering American worker supposed to think?   | David Leonhardt                            |       |
| 7/2/09 | ECON  | The June unemployment numbers are out and the news isn't good. 467,000 jobs were lost last month but how many were gained? We hear from listeners that have recently landed work; how did they do it, are they making more money, and can they offer some advice?   |  |       |
| 7/2/09 | TECH  | More and more frequently, online popularity rankings allow us to make decisions more quickly. But are they better decisions? Are they changing our behavior as consumers? And do such wide-spread rankings lead to more informed choices or more uniform ones?  | Matt Salganik, Kevin Maney, Russell Dicker |       |
| 7/2/09 | SPOR  | Manny Ramirez, the Dodgers slugger who just completed a 50-game suspension for steroid use, is about to return to the majors. Will he be shunned by bitter Dodgers fans, angry at his proven cheating and his seeming lack of remorse? Chances are good that Dodgers fans will have no such reservations rooting for Manny and will happily return to "Mannywood" with a collective warm embrace for their dreadlocked hero. Do baseball fans really care about steroid use?  | Nick Roman                                 |       |
| 7/2/09 | SCI   | Can NASA solve Earth's problems from space? It can try. JPL scientists are using space-based technologies to track earth's movements and shifting fault lines in an attempt to not just predict, but to understand, earthquakes. Patt talks with JPL geophysicist Maggi Glasscoe to find out more.  | Maggi Glasscoe                             |       |
| 7/2/09 | MIL   | Will fireworks be the only boom in the Hawaiian sky this 4th of July? North Korea may launch a missile toward Hawaii this Independence day but island residents don't seem too worried by the threat. Would the 28-story, golf ball shaped U.S. military radar system floating in the Pacific be enough to keep you from shaking in your grass-skirt?   |  |       |

| 7/6/09 | HEAL | Radioactive phosphogypsum doesn't sound like something you'd want in your home. And it isn't... it's a radioactive industrial waste byproduct that causes metal corrosion and many potential health problems. Unfortunately, the material has found its way into Chinese wallboard--and in 2006, some 10 million pounds of the drywall were shipped to the US. Problems are cropping up in new homes throughout the Southeast, including a rotten eggs smell from the sulfur content. In California, the wallboard was almost certainly used--but the dry climate prevents the foul smells but not the potential corrosive and health effects. | 7/9/09  | HEAL | Governor Schwarzenegger has pledged to limit the "waste, fraud, and abuse" in California's In-Home Supportive Services program, which provides care to senior citizens and the disabled. He says that the state could save $400-500 million per year through stricter regulations, including mandatory fingerprinting of home health recipients and providers and IHSS enforcement through unannounced home visits. State Democrats and program advocates argue that the governor is cutting essential services to close the budget gap. | 7/20/09 | SCI  | On July 16th, 1969, a Saturn V rocket thundered off the pad at Cape Canaveral, carrying Apollo 11 on its historic mission to the moon. Four days later, on July 20th, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin became the first men to walk on the moon. But the program that made the landing possible started years before that, with a series of lunar exploration probes, many of them designed right here at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. In 1972, the last two astronauts walked on the lunar surface, ending America's moon program...or at least putting it on long-term hiatus. Today, NASA and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory are gearing up again--this time to return to the moon and establish a permanent base. JPL is working on the landing systems, probes and other tools that will once again help make this dream reality. NASA's Ares rockets and Orion spacecraft will carry the next generation to the moon. | 7/20/09 | SCI  | 40 Years ago today, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin became the first men to walk on the moon. But the astronauts entrusted their lives to 400,000 unsung heroes: the brilliant scientists, engineers and technicians who made the trip possible. Charles Lowry was just one of those heroes...he was an engineering manager working in Downey at North American Aviation. He developed the parachutes that brought the command module down to a safe splash landing. As with every part of the moon mission, the engineering challenges were huge--just as the solutions were often brilliant and elegant. Lowry is currently working on the new moon ship, the Orion. But he remembers with pride his contribution to sending a man to the moon and, in his case, returning him safely to the Earth.   | Charles Lowry   |       |

The 10 Freeway east and the 110 Freeway south will allow solo commuters to drive in the carpool lanes for a price. Tolls range from 25 cents to $1.40 per mile. Even though several other highways in the state have toll roads, this is a first for L.A. County freeways. The legislative package of 31 bills includes measures to borrow billions from cities and counties, a plan that is controversial with members of both parties. Treasury Secretary Timothy F. Geithner and National Economic Council Director Larry H. Summers refused to rule out the possibility of a middle class tax hike to reconcile the budget deficit, despite Obama's campaign promise not to raise any taxes for those making less than $250,000 per year. | 8/3/09 | TRAN | A bipartisan bill to bolster airline safety was approved by a House committee Thursday. Prompted by February's regional airline crash in Buffalo, New York, which killed all 50 people on board, the new measure would strengthen pilot training, screening and professional development requirements. It would also require the FAA to track scientific research on pilot fatigue issues. FAA Administrator Randy Babbitt says these congressional efforts are "redundant and misguided." But pilot union leaders and independent safety experts say the new legislation might compel the FAA and airlines to embrace necessary and long demanded safety changes. What really needs to be done to improve airline safety? | Roger Cohen, Capt Ross Aimer, Capt John Cox | 30:00 |

Agents and contractors who used harsh interrogation techniques approved under the Bush administration could now face criminal prosecution. Are we seeing accountability, at last? A blow to counterterrorism? Or, merely a scapegoat?   | Siobhan Gorman   | 50:00 |
| 8/25/09 | DIS  | Failed levees and water pumps were just some factors behind the devastation left by Hurricane Katrina. Yet, nearly four years later, many of those water pumps would not work in another major storm. Guest host Jon Beaupre talks to KPCC's environmental reporter Molly Peterson about the condition of New Orleans as the city approaches the anniversary of Hurricane Katrina.  | Molly Peterson   | 10:00 |
| 8/25/09 | MEDI | Rupert Murdoch says Google and news aggregators are stealing content and newspapers shouldn't take it anymore. He's now calling on major news publishers to create a consortium and charge for digital content. Is this the call to arms that newspapers need in order to survive? Or a losing battle against free Internet content? Guest host Jon Beaupre explores the winding road to making content profitable again.   | David Carr, Ken Doctor, Gordon Crovitz                   | 30:00 |

| 8/25/09 | EDU  | For a district and a school board that is often accused of avoiding hard decisions on reform, LAUSD is about to unleash an entirely new way of operating public schools. The Board of Education is set to vote this afternoon on an initiative that will allow private operators to take over about a third of LAUSD campuses and expand "choice" at other LAUSD schools. Parents at poorly performing schools could have new options on where to send their kids and the teacher's union might lose a lot of power—can the scheme work?  | Adolfo Guzman-Lopez, AJ Duffy, Ben Austin, Diane Ravitch |       |

| 8/25/09 | HOUS | A nationwide home price index reports today that a recovery may be slowly underway. The Case-Shiller Home Price Index shows that home prices in 20 major U.S. cities were up 1.4% in June, which is more than triple the growth rate it found in May. Any real recovery, of course, will take quite some time: home prices are now at levels last seen in early 2003, and they're down 15% from a year ago. Is this the start of a real comeback, or just a temporary bump in the middle of a larger disaster?  | Paul Habibi  |       |

| 9/1/09 | HIST | The Chula Vista-Park View Blue Bombers accomplished something that is remarkably rare in California sports history—winning a Little League World Series. The first California team to take the championship since 1993, the Blue Bombers came from behind against Taiwan to win the title game after a drama-filled tournament. Now back home the Blue Bombers have a victory parade to look forward to, and of course bragging rights for West Coast baseball.   | Rod Roberto  |       |
| 9/1/09 | HEAL | While the summer has proven an extended preview of the emotion and hysteria surrounding the healthcare reform effort, the true fight starts on Sept. 8th, the day Congress reconvenes from its August recess. That is when the Democrats will try to salvage the "public option" for government-run insurance and the Republicans will offer their own alternatives for reform—or just try to torpedo any Democratic proposal. How will the healthcare fight in Congress unfold? Patt talks to two of the combatants. | Xavier Becarra, Tom Price,   |       |

At the same time, Ralphs is discounting prices on produce and often-purchased goods. Their actions are part of an effort to gain back market share from cost-conscious consumers, who have turned to discounters like Wal-Mart and Target. | 9/4/09 | ECON | The national unemployment rate crept up to 9.7% for August, it's highest level in 26-years, which is obviously pretty bad. However, employers cut jobs at their slowest pace in a year, which is kind of good. Men are getting hammered with job losses, the male unemployment rate over 10%, while women are showing a slight improvement at 8%. | 9/8/09 | LIT  | Did the modern human species arise after our ancestors started cooking their food? In his new book, "Catching Fire", Richard Wrangham argues that it was the practice of cooking food that was central to human evolution—more so than the use of tools or meat-eating. Since cooking makes food more digestible and frees up more energy, it transformed the human body and allowed for bigger, more-developed brains. There were also gender implications. When labor was divided between hunting and cooking, it encouraged structures of marriage and family. Wrangham highlights the importance of cooking by detailing the danger of a complete raw foods diet, and explains how food labeling hides the true caloric impact of different foods. Richard Wrangham joins Larry Mantle to discuss how cooking changed the human species. | Richard Wrangham   | 30:00 |

| 9/28/09 | LAW  | An LA judge has dismissed the murder case against Bruce Lisker after prosecutors said they don't have the evidence to try him for the 1983 murder of his mother. Lisker spent 26 years behind bars before a federal judge in August overturned his conviction, ruling that he had been prosecuted with "false evidence." The judge's findings mirrored those of a 2005 LA Times investigation. Larry talks with the LA Times' writers and Bruce Lisker about the legal odyssey they fought, which led to freedom.   | Bruce Lisker, Matt Lait, Scott Glover      | 30:00 |

| 9/28/09 | SCI  | 40 years ago man first set foot on the moon. Ever since then, advocates of manned space exploration have had their eyes on the next logical destination...the planet Mars. But the technological challenges of going to Mars are much, much greater. But the single biggest hurdle isn't, surprisingly, getting to Mars. It's getting back. Now some are suggesting a one-way journey, where NASA would continue to rocket supplies to Mars for the lifetime of the astronaut volunteers who would establish a base and live out the remainder of their lives doing science on the surface of Mars.   | Lawrence Krauss                            | 30:00 |

The LA Kings, unsatisfied with the level of coverage of sports in LA, has decided to do something novel--and perhaps a bit unnerving. They are "paying" for coverage by hiring Los Angeles Daily News sports reporter Rich Hammond. But how can one expect objective coverage under such circumstances? What does this mean for the future of sports reporting and reporting generally?   | Rich Hammond, Mike Alt                     | 10:00 |
| 9/29/09 | YOUT | Since the 1990's, more than 80,000 Chinese children have been adopted abroad, with the common belief that many were abandoned due to the government's one-child policy and a preference for having boys. Those who violate the policy are subject to heavy fines, but Chinese parents are coming forward to report that some officials instead are taking their children forcefully and putting them up for adoption. These officials are motivated to profit from the $3,000 per child that adoptive parents pay to orphanages. Larry Mantle looks into the story and discusses the concerns and available options for parents of adopted children. | Barbara Demick, Jill Boyer, Susan Robinson | 30:00 |
